Hello, Ensign Nick Manns here, I hope you all had a wonderful Christmas and a great new year so far. I have gained one student to teach my martial art judo. Judo, for interested, is known as the "gentle way" and focuses on taking an attacker to the ground with a variety of throwing techniques, and submitting them with a hold, choke, or arm bar. In other news, Marine Cadet Isaac Jinks and I have created/come up with an away mission to the Devils punch bowl/Turkey run State Park, and prism aerospace museum/the Indianapolis zoo. We are going on only two of these.

"Stress and S. A. D. (Seasonal affective disorder)"

Submitted By: Cmdr. Renée L. Hobbs, CMO

The holidays can be a very joyful time of year! But, they can also be stressful. The winter weather is usually cold, and the skies are dark and dreary. This causes a lack of sunlight, which can in turn cause depression, called seasonal affective disorder. This can cause people to feel sad and down in the dumps. People often feel stressed out in trying to find Christmas presents for others on their lists. It often helps to take vitamins, and to get some light with heat lamps. Sometimes, medication is needed.

I have made a continuing report on the previous log. Our away missions are being put into order. Our first away mission is going to be towards Grissom Aero base; our alternative is Indianapolis zoo. Our second away mission would be towards the Devils punch bowl; alternative is towards Turkey run national Park. All have been cool cooperatively made with CRO Nick Manns.

Taken from the Baptist Bread devotional

“behold, the eye of the Lord is upon them that fear him, upon them that hope in his mercy;” Psalm 33:18

Hope is a word not used very often in today's vocabulary. The in fragrance of this word, however, does not minimize its importance. Right at this very minute, all of us are hoping in something. We may be hoping the weather is nice today, we might be hoping the results from the doctor come back favorable, or we may be hoping to receive a special gift we have our eyes on. Whatever the case, we are all hoping for something.

The author of our psalm of praise gives numerous reasons to 'hope in the Lord.' Let's mention just a few. And in verse five, he says, "the earth is full of the goodness of the Lord." In verse 10, he states, "the Lord bringing the Council of the heathen to naught:" finally, in verse 11, he exalts, "the counsel of the Lord standeth forever." All of these reasons and many more give ample evidence why our hope should rest solely on our great God! In verse one, of our text, the psalmist writes,

"... Praises, comely for the upright." We have every reason to submit to our Lord, and wait patiently for him, to praise his name, to give honor to his magic majestic character, and ultimately, to hope in him.

It truly is a blessing to know that, though the world around us crumbles, we can stand on a firm foundation. Hope in temporal things is never justified; hope in eternal things is always rewarded. Make today a day in which you realize the blessing of our HOPE! – S. T.

New Trek-Themed Keyboard

Posted by T'Bonz - 09/12/10 at 12:12 pm

Several Star Trek-themed keyboards might get typists looking down at their keyboards instead of their computer screens when they type.

Keyscaper, manufacturer of several Star Trek-themed keyboards, has just released a new original series-themed keyboard, as well as a matching mouse.

The image of the USS Enterprise on the new keyboard has been created using a “super-secret” metallic ink, instead of a sticker or a special wrap.

The keyboard has a limited run of five hundred units, and comes in either a wired or a wireless model, with the wireless model using two AA batteries. It retails for $89.99. The companion mouse (wireless) sells for $39.99.

The newest keyboards, plus the other Trek-themed ones, can be seen and/or purchased here.

Keyscaper also sells other themed keyboards, including ones based on: college teams, The Simpsons, the U.S. armed forces, Marvel comics and much more.
